Introduction

Aura, designed by the Danish studio Norm Architects, was created with the aim of being more than just a chair around a table. From the outset, the design was conceived as an integral part of a communal setting: an element capable of contributing to the atmosphere of the space and strengthening the sense of togetherness among those gathered around the table.

Aura, progettata dallo studio danese Norm Architects, nasce con l'intento di essere qualcosa di più di una semplice seduta attorno al tavolo. Fin dall'inizio il progetto è stato concepito come parte integrante di un ambiente collettivo: un elemento capace di contribuire all'atmosfera dello spazio e di rafforzare il senso di comunione tra le persone riunite attorno al tavolo.

“A refined sense of comfort that encourages interaction, dialogue, and a natural connection between people.”

Norm Architects is a Copenhagen-based studio working across architecture, interior, and product design. Their philosophy is centered on human experience, where simplicity, balance, and tactility define every project. Their work reflects a Scandinavian design language focused on calm atmospheres, soft minimalism and carefully considered proportions, creating objects that feel both functional and emotionally resonant.
